

Inyeon

Wandering life's lonely, frozen lane,
You discovered me, alive but breathless, in pain.
In aimless existence, lost I was found,
Your smile, a radiant warmth, all around.

The mundane and dull no longer reality.
Each day instead a rose-hued tapestry, eagerly
Unfurling bottomless adventures
And you the locus of every desire.

Your touch, a spark, ignited fires so deep,
Unveiling feelings and passions asleep.
As our affections blossomed, erupting yet higher,
My flaws emerged, their timing dire.

Unable to perceive the depth of my wrongs,
Daggers I cast, in your direction, so strong.
I failed to walk, nay crawl, in your shoes,
I'm sorry, sincerely, for I have no excuse.

Beneath the setting sun's soft light,
I reminisce with joy, feeling things just right
Counting every gift that you've sent,
None as precious as the time together we've spent.